Dedicated to

Edna K. Wenger

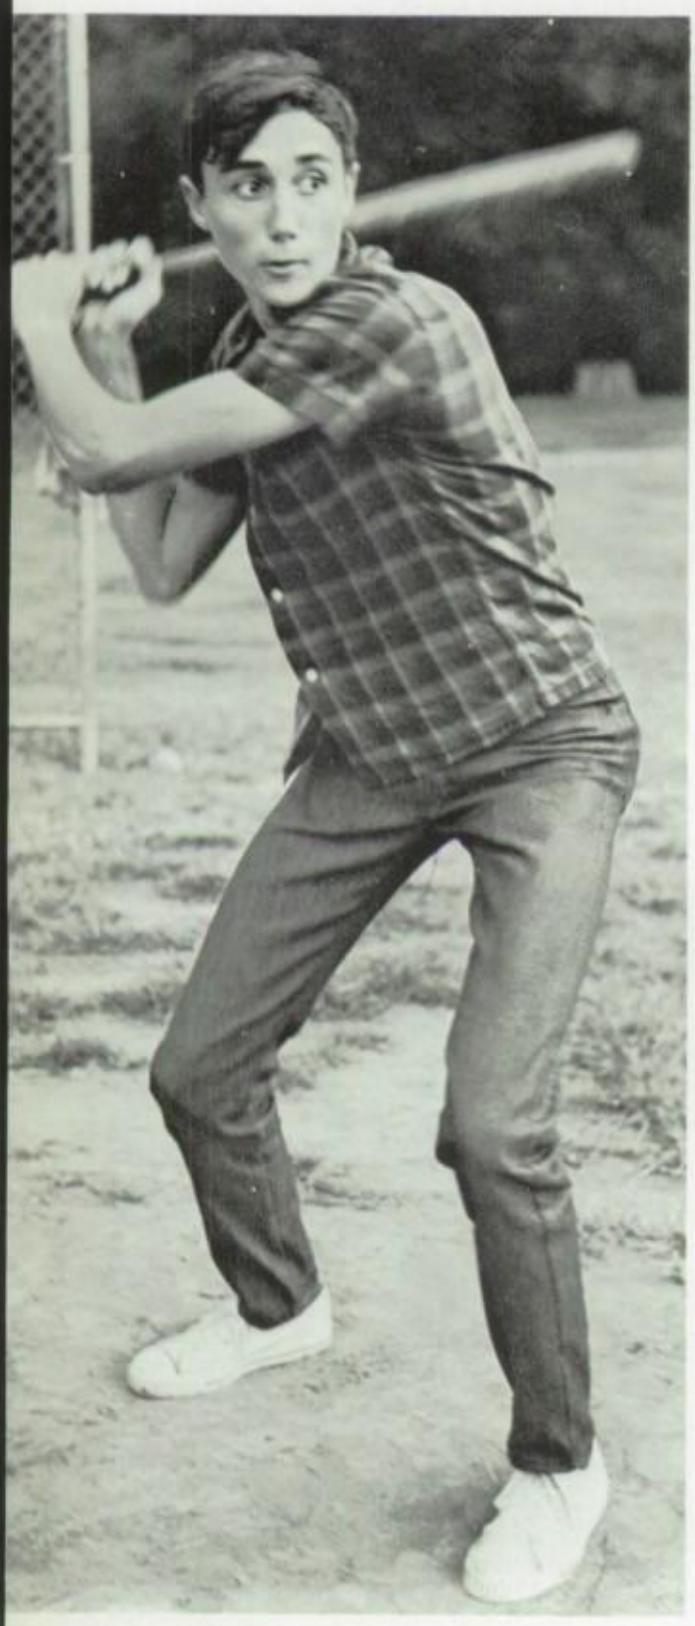
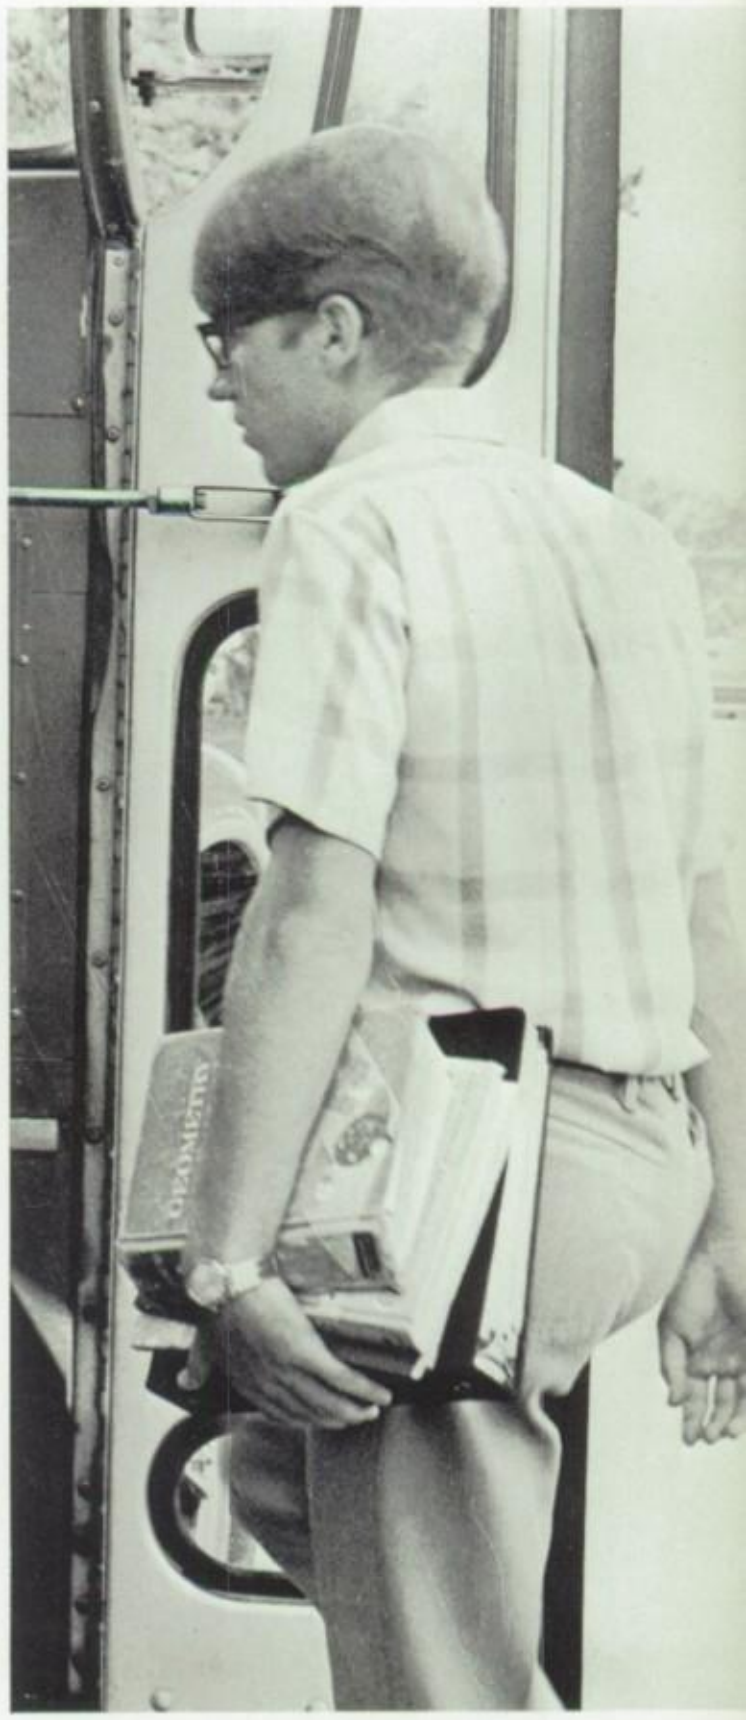
Because the kindness and understanding in your heart is too big to keep hidden there

With respect and appreciation,
The Senior Class



LIFE

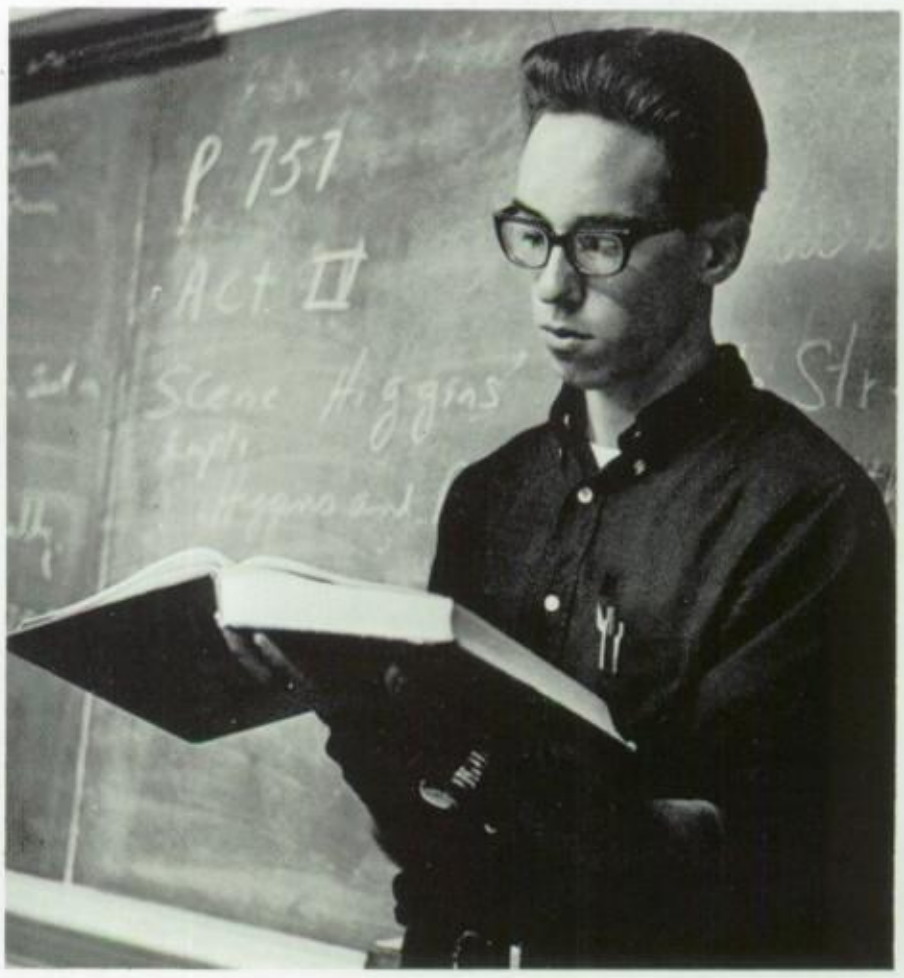


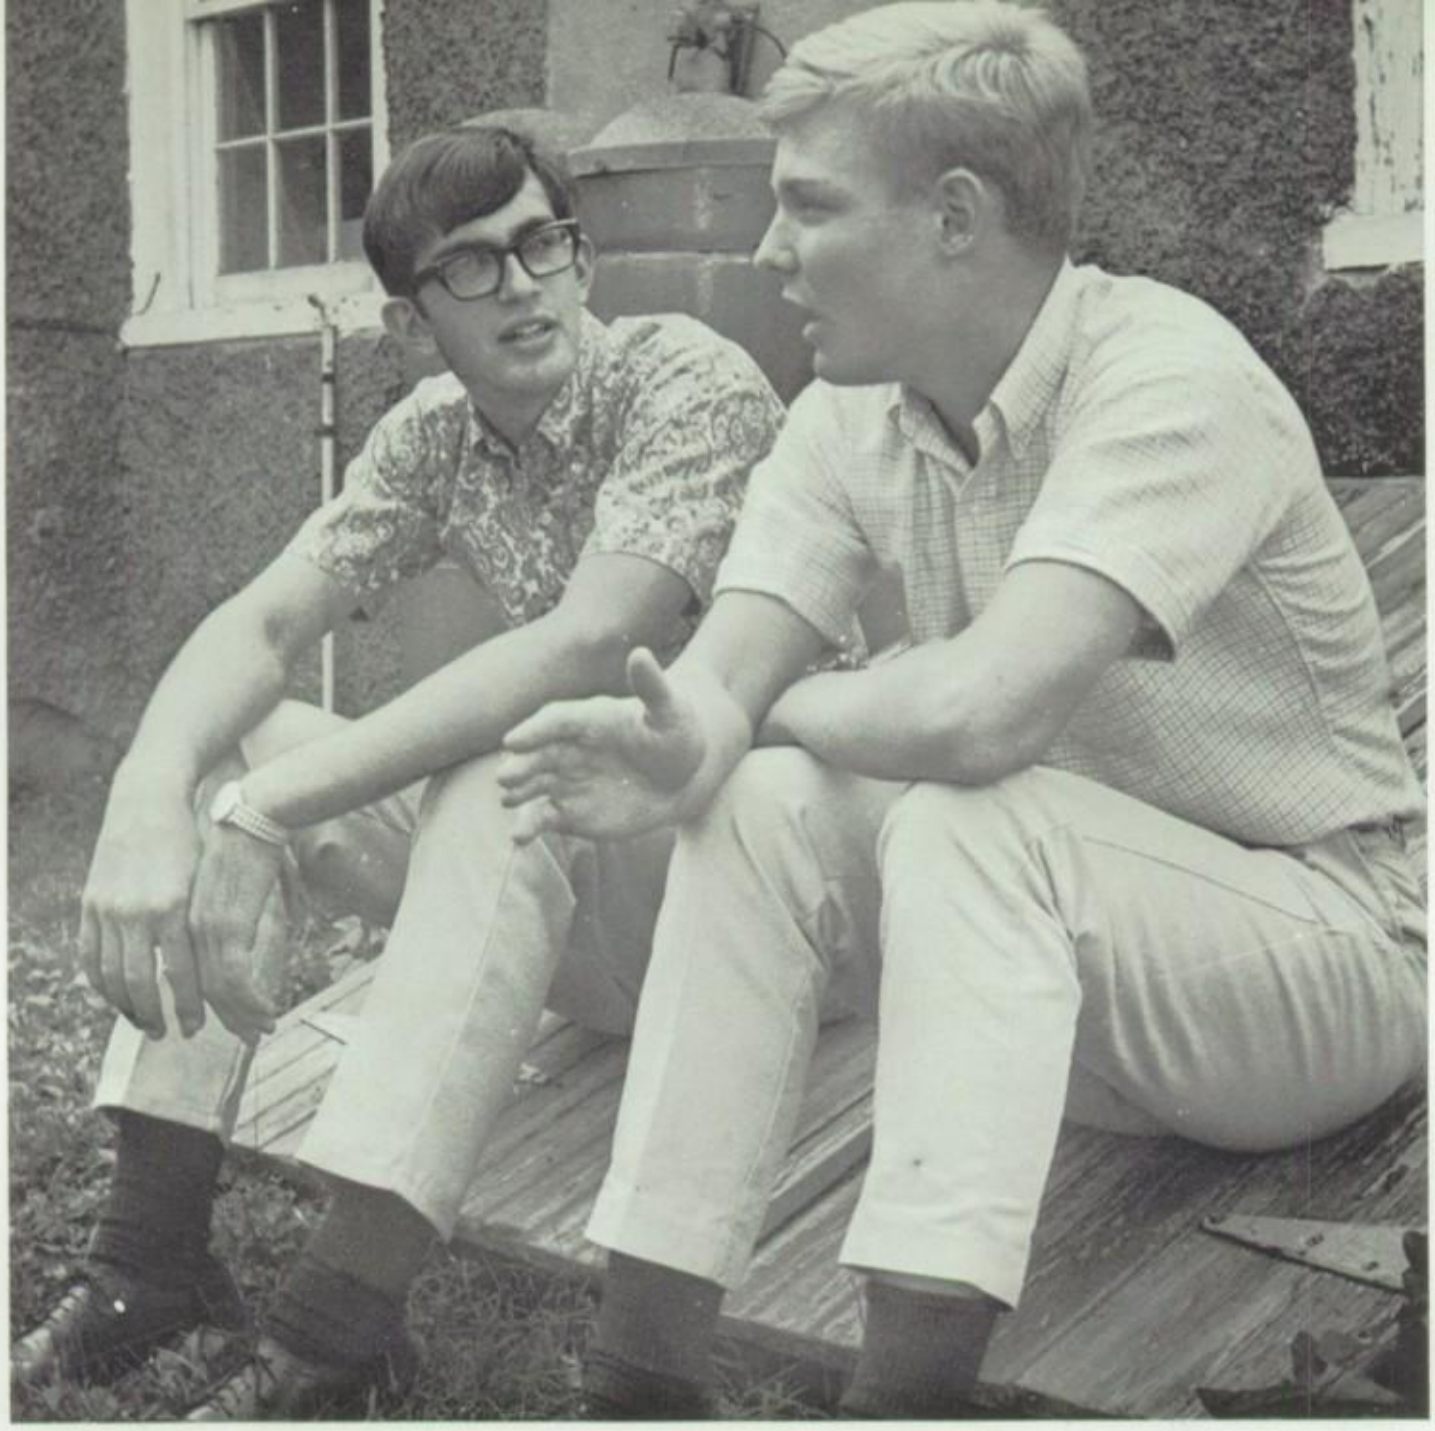
. . . is a hard pull

They throw you a rope
and tell you to help.

Some say the best way to get a good grip is to spit on your hands and pat the dust.

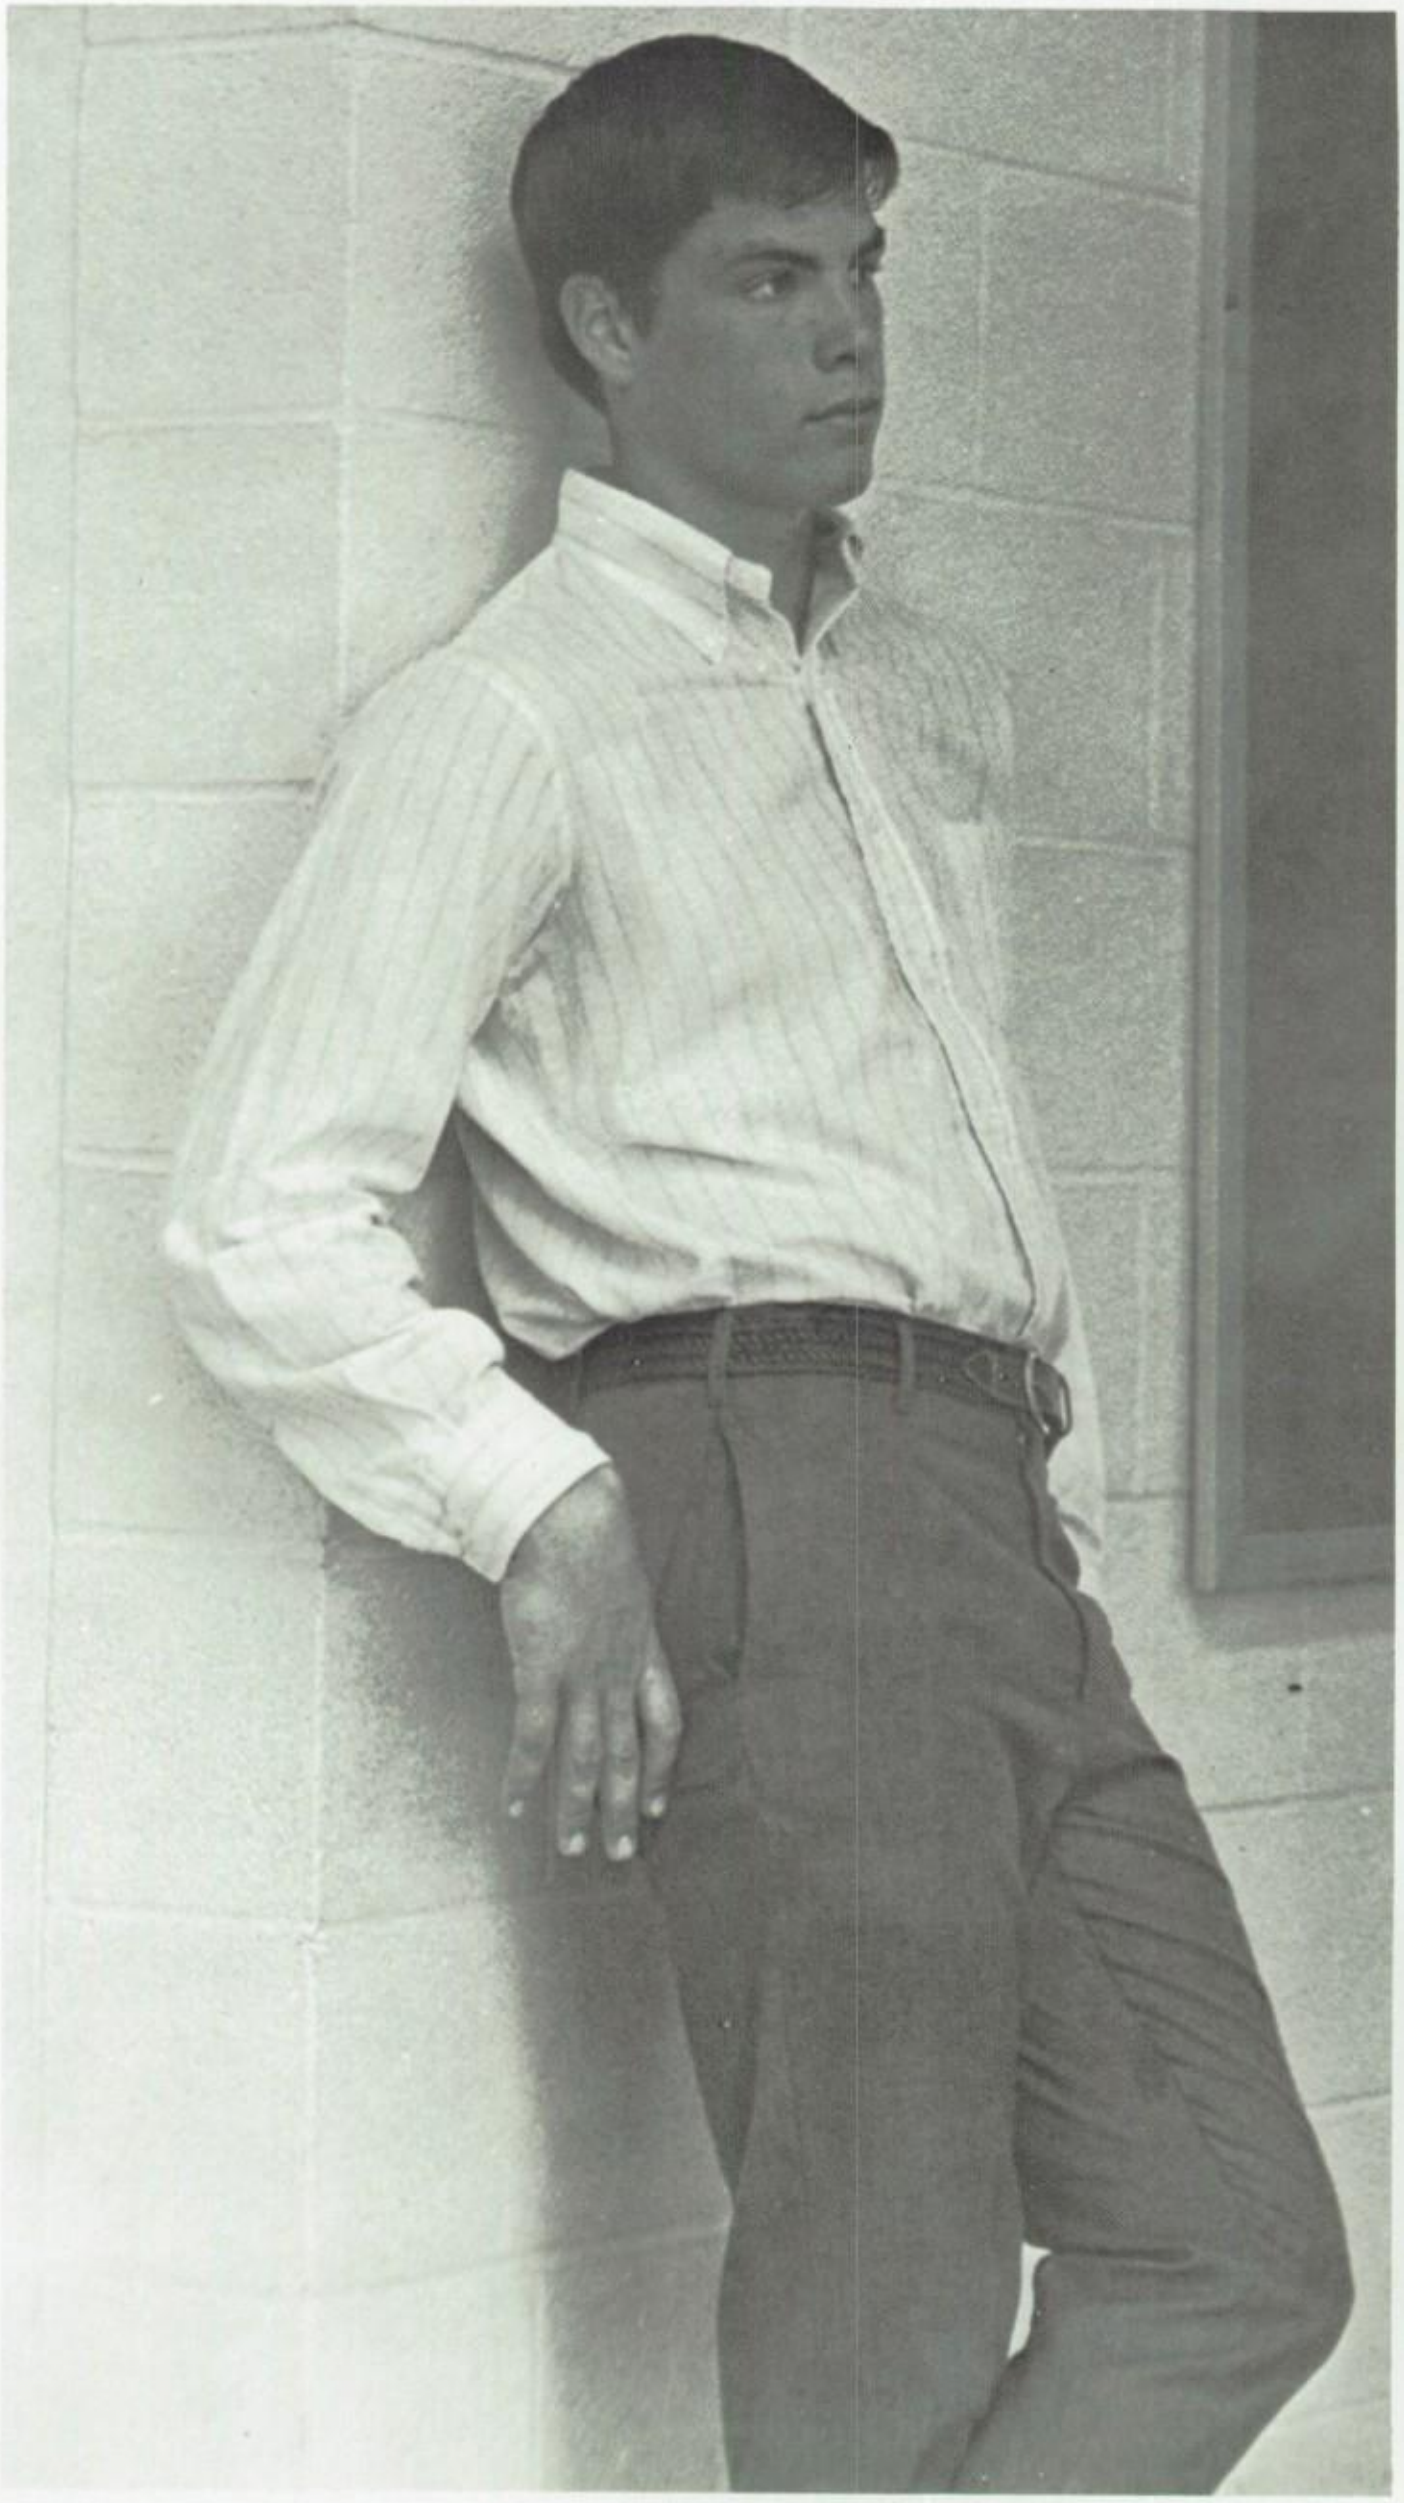
Others say the secret lies in how you curl your fingers over the rope.



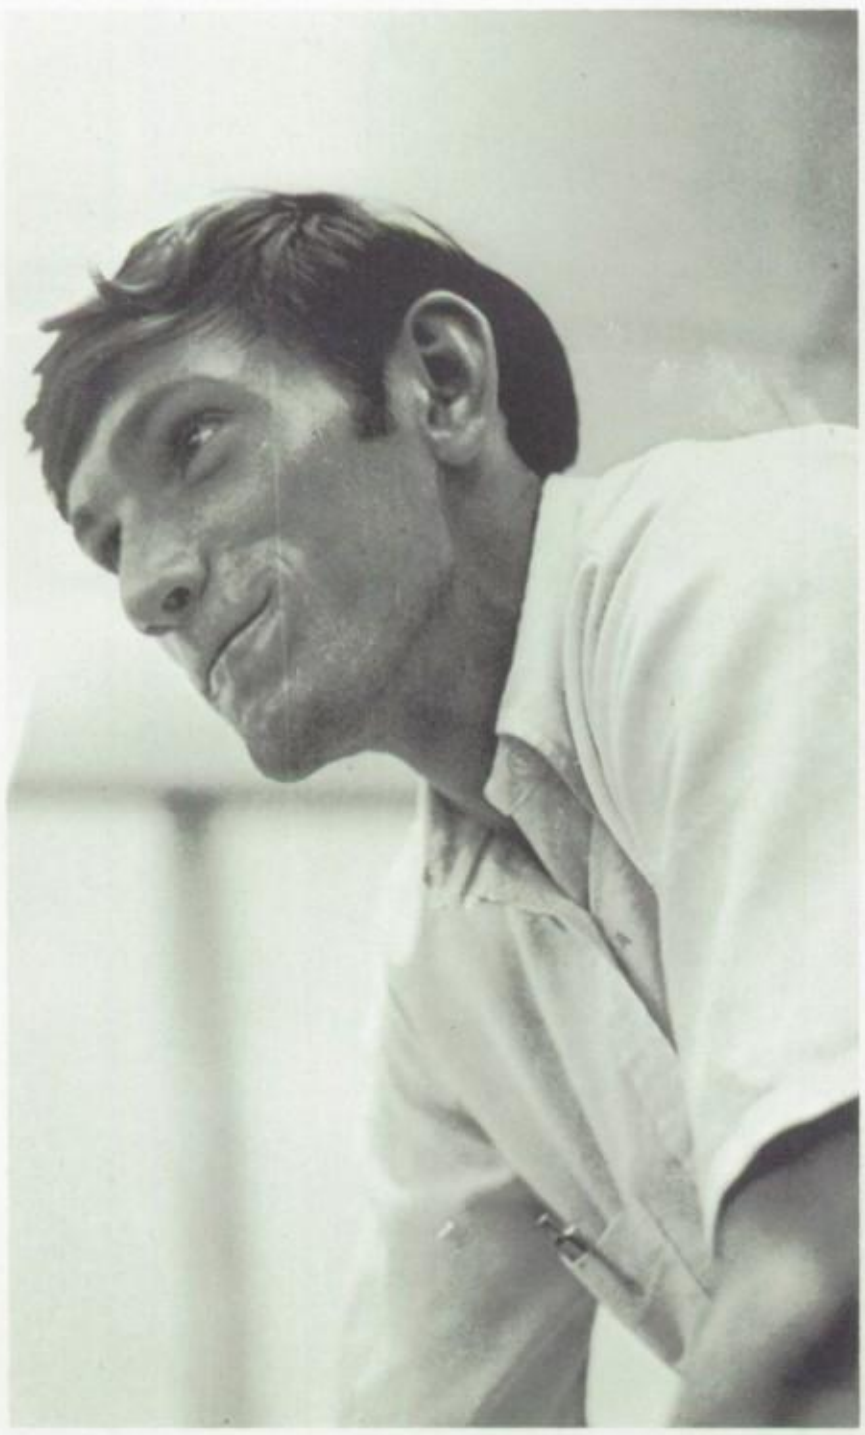


Every day you borrow the opinions and ideas of others — use some and reject some.

Maybe the idea you used should have been rejected, or the opinion you discarded put to use.

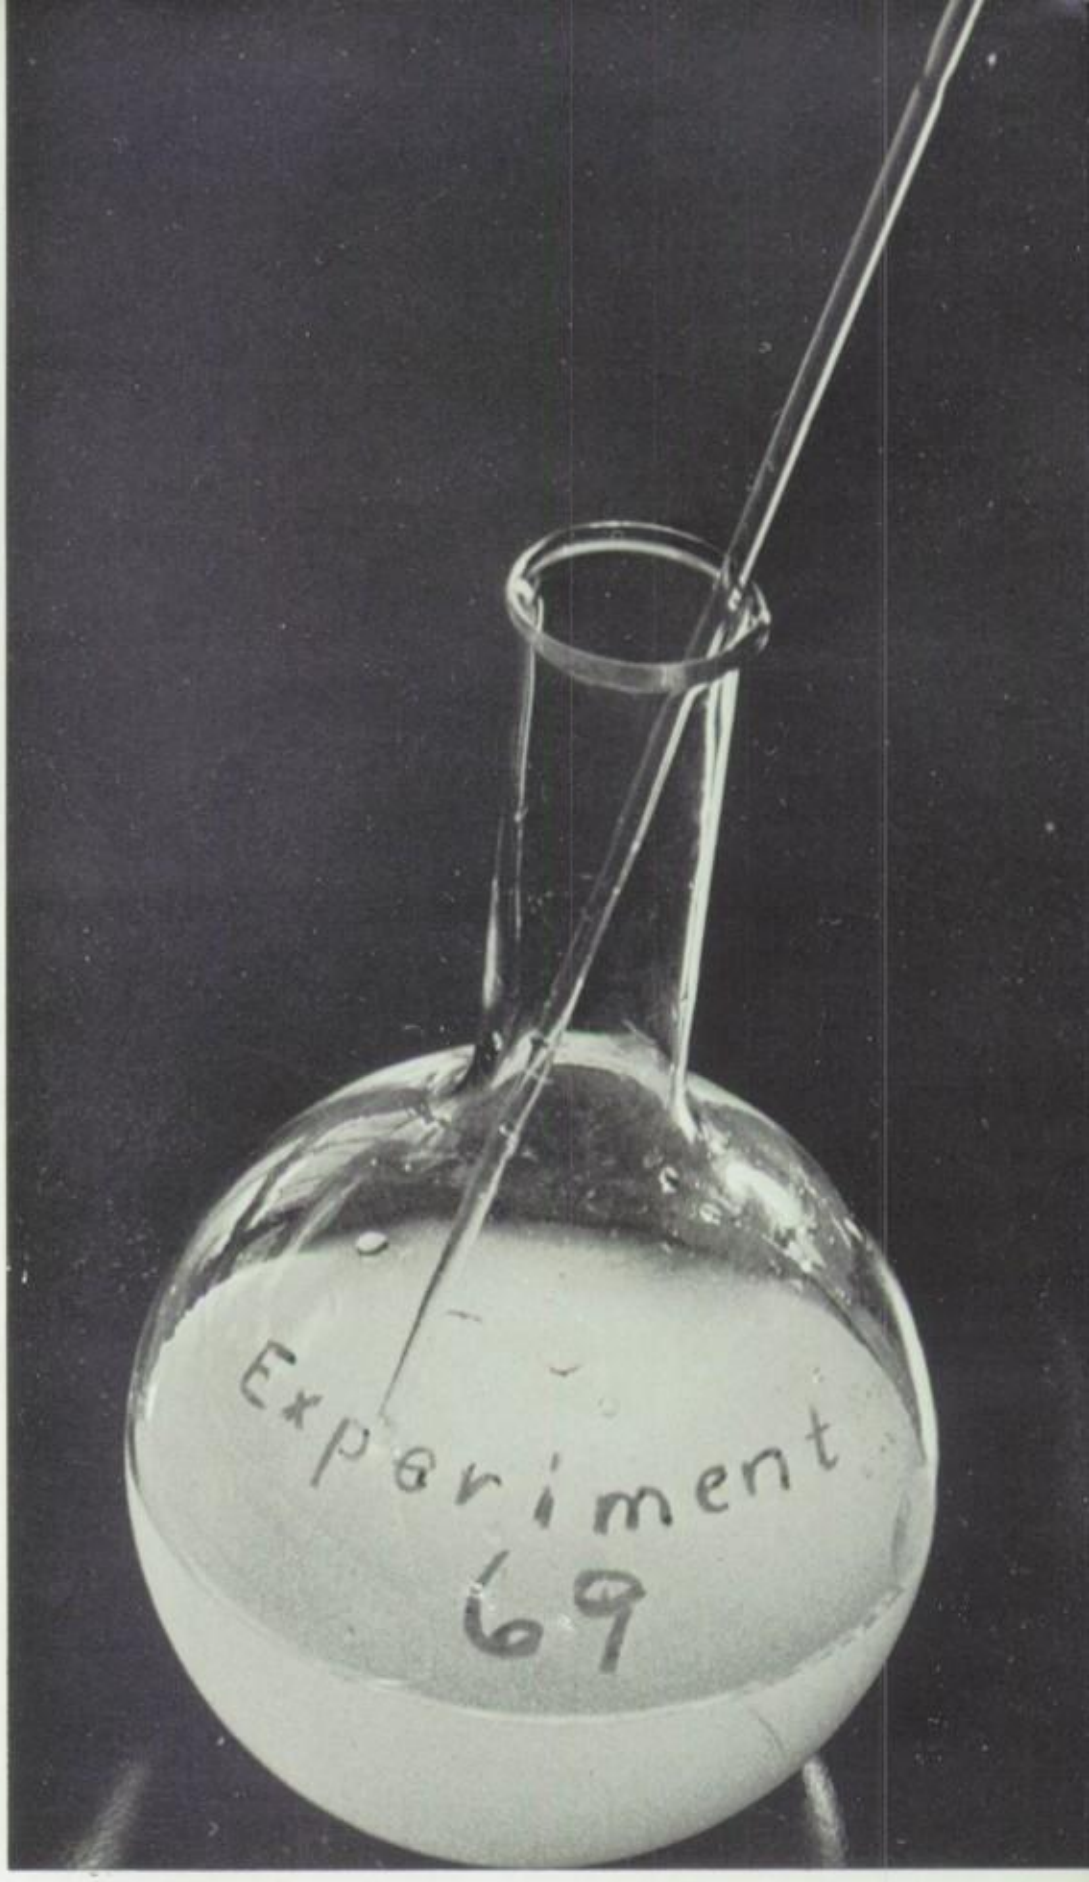


Because you have the final choice on how to grip the rope, you don't blame anyone if your fingers slide.



Your life is what you make it.

The choices you make every day are part of a huge experiment . . .



And the events that make up this book will go down in the LAB. BOOK of LIFE as Experiment '69.

Some things depreciate with age.
Teachers do not.
Each passing year adds more
To their total value,
Because teachers do not build castles
In the air
But in the lives and minds
Of students.

When a teacher goes beyond
Pounding cold, hard facts
Into a student's mind,
When a teacher seeks to build more than Castles of knowledge there—
When he strives to build friendships . . .

A student doesn't stop at merely Sorting out his teachers
By their classroom techniques
And what type of tests they give
He sees more than the teacher image
He sees a personality.

Some people say
A teacher should remain
Cool and objective.
At L.M.S. that is impossible.

Faculty

They are

Maintainers of a high educational standard.

They
Enforce written rules
Double as teachers
Travel home on foot
And take an interest in our progress rate.

They provide our school with an element of stability through unfailing consistency.

Square roots, vectors, planes, and circles plagued some of us, fascinated others, put some of us to sleep, and made others think. The braver ones took senior math and struggled with math induction and limits of series. Then there was math club, which some took to see the other side of math, the enjoyable side.

Sometime in our senior year we wished for the simplicity of the amoeba or even the mole concept. But when our spirits were at a new low, the physics lab guide came up with a funny little experiment involving slinkys, and our drive for knowledge was restored.

We believe that the basics of Christianity do not change. The principles that we study are the same ones that Timothy studied under his mother's instruction. But the real problem is to find out how these age-old principles should be applied in the now—to decide what their relationship is to the daily grind.

History is a rerun of the drama of the past, a stage crowded with the faces of all who have lived.

Some of the things we learned in literature may stay with us for the rest of our lives. This course is more than a study of great works in prose and poetry. It is a discovery of truth and beauty.

Only seven percent of the U.S. population is employed in farming. So those who enter this field must be qualified and well-trained so that they are able to produce this nation's bread and butter.

The co-ordination and planned defense of basketball was pounded into our minds and reflexes until it became a part of us.

There's not much activity on campus at 5:30 a.m. But even at this early hour, the kitchen is busy. And because the kitchen is in the basement of the chapel, we don't get to see how hard our cooks work. Sure, we always get our meals, but most of the time we don't think about all the time spent getting them ready.

Cooks are easy to take for granted, but we couldn't get along without them.

Head cook Ruth Lefever dips the sauce pan for a routine taste test while Anna Witmer stirs vigorously.

No one can say that the senior class doesn't use its members. There seems to be a committee for everything. Can sew a fine seam ... 1973-B.S. in Home Ec.

Washington, D. C., was sunny and crisp the day we haunted its buildings and streets. Our guide was a wonderful snowy-haired man who was amazed at the vast quantities of turtlenecks in our midst.

There are many little things we'll remember about this trip. Like missing Senator Dirksen by one corner. Like hearing Dave Kraybill ask every other White House guard, "Are you the President?" Like seeing in one White House room an obscure painting dedicated to the memory of John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Like watching Advisor Elton G. Moshier propped against a tree near the Washington Monument, contentedly eating from his sack of sandwiches and bananas. Like meeting a capitol guard who claimed he was born and raised in Lancaster County. Like seeing the inaugural platform in its infant stage.

Then in the evening our buses rolled up in the gathering darkness to the base of the Jefferson Memorial, made brilliantly resplendent by a multitude of searching lights. There, in statue-like stillness, Thomas Jefferson sits and watches the screaming jets that fly low and flash reflections in the pool that also mirrors the Washington Monument. On the massive walls behind and around this great man, are the words that spell the independence of our land, words that are ageless and immortal against the motion of time.

The man who said,
"A song is not a song until you sing it,"
Was right.
The transfer of music from paper
To living sound
Is a creation of art.

While we are not masters,
We have,
In our small way,
Created the lives of numerous pieces of music
That will live on Past the concert dates.
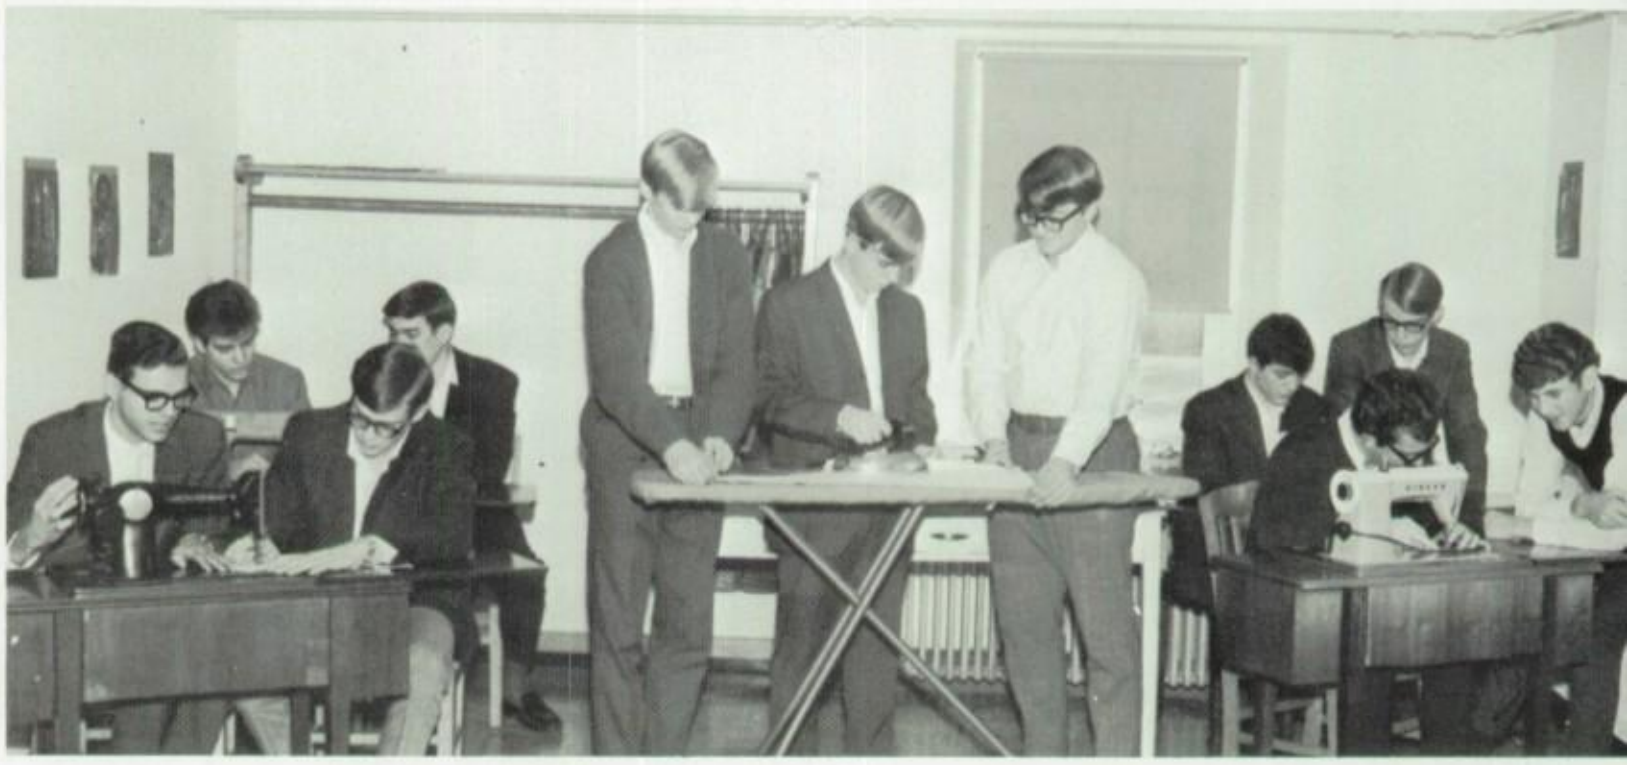
A song, when born, never dies.

Hey, you—I mean the guy in the back row—you're supposed to be singing.

Chef's Club

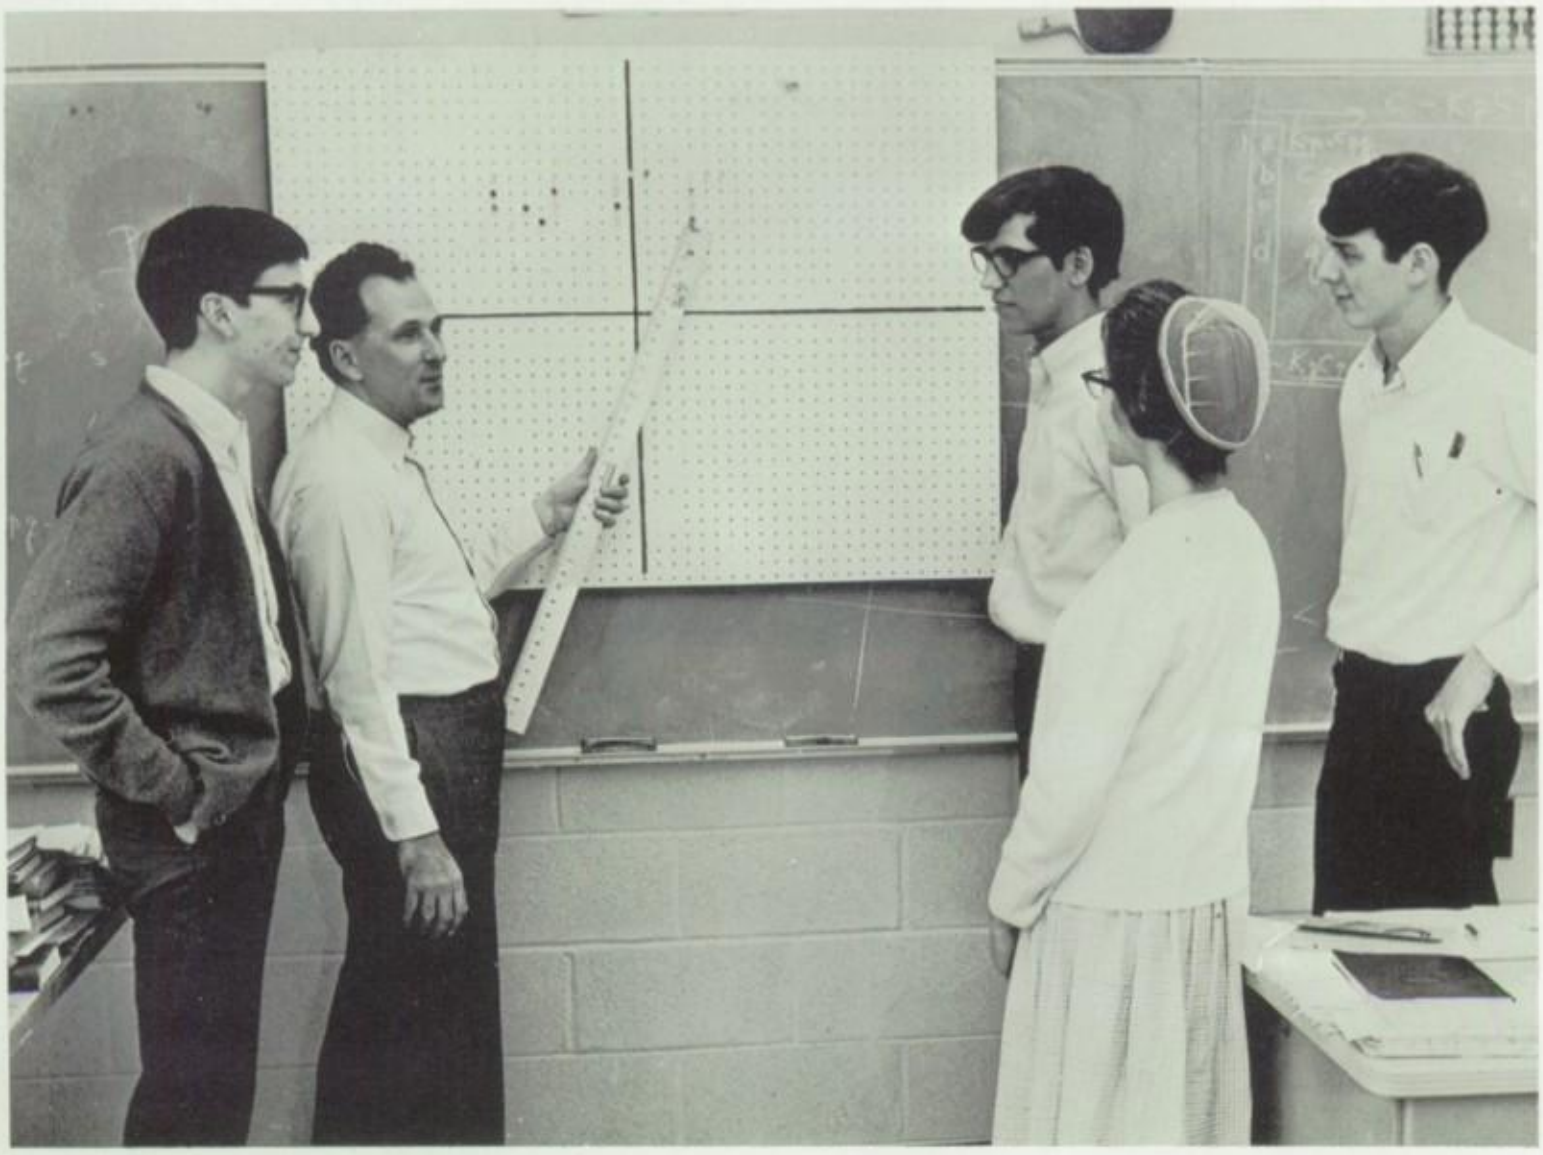
The invasion of a woman's world is carried on rather successfully here. These taste-testers claim that the mixing and blending of ordinary ingredients produce some note-worthy foods.



Bird Study

Walking down the back lane of our campus, they keep their eyes peeled for unusual flying objects from the Aves class. But when the wind is free and the air is cold, they are content to stay indoors and contemplate Peterson's Field Guide for Birds.

Math Club is designed to make its members think and to have fun thinking. That's why they play games like "Woof 'n Proof" and "Tuff."



Math Club

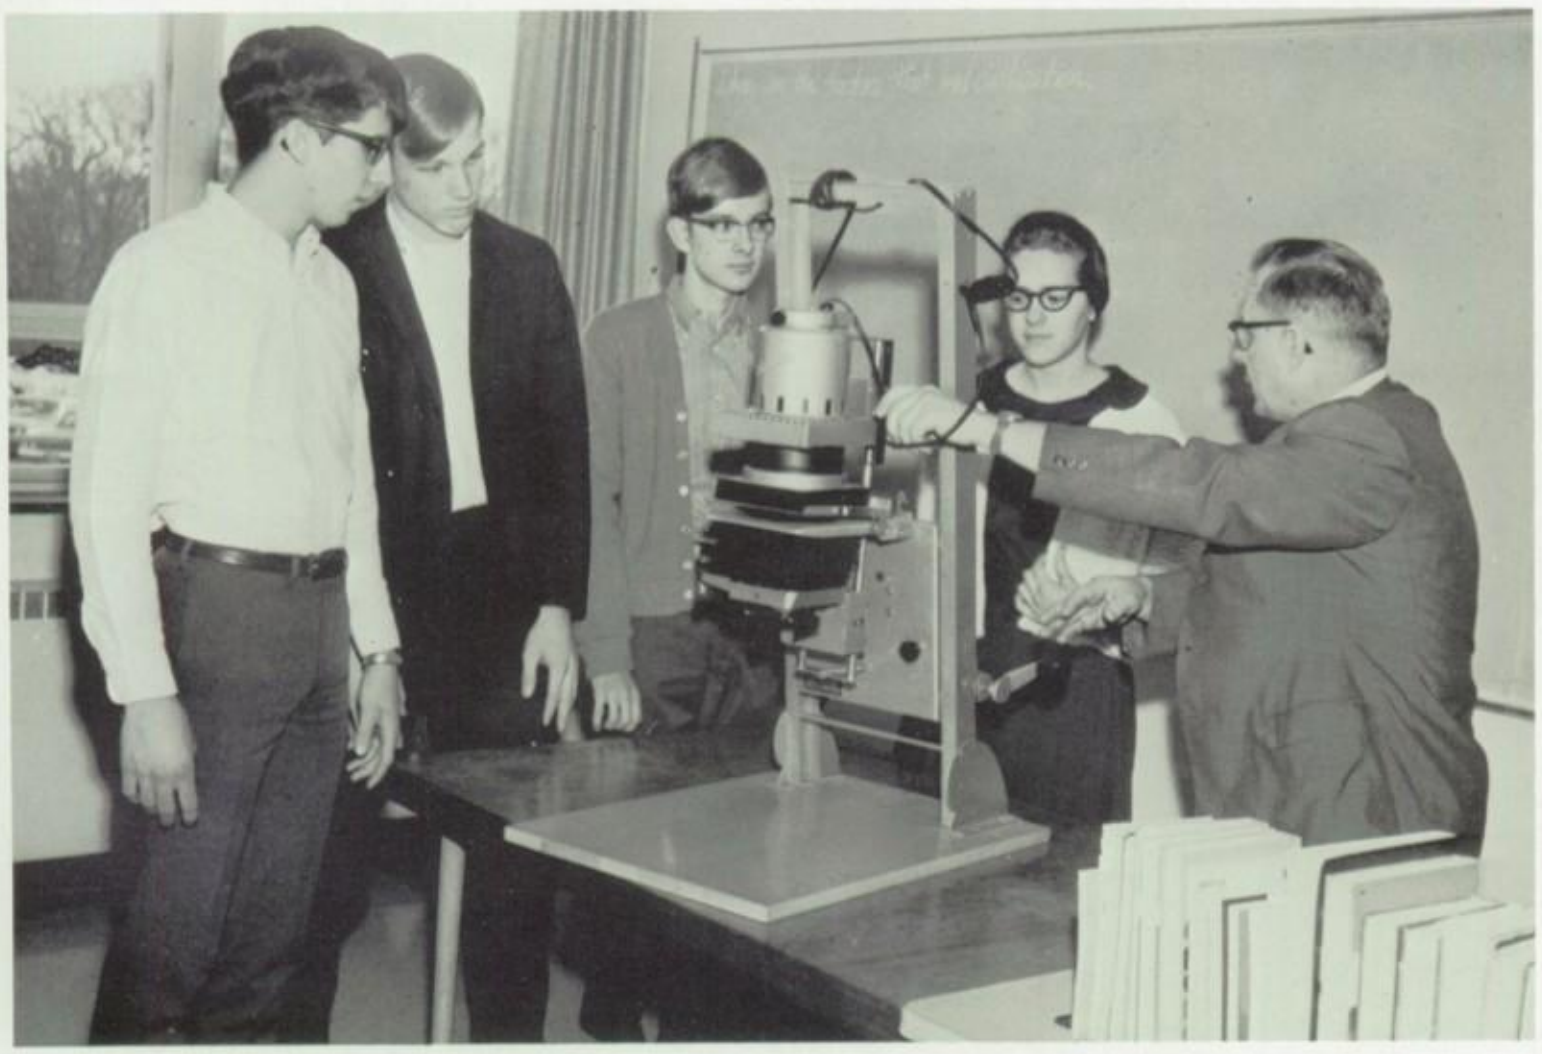


Foto Fans

They learn the intricate parts of a camera and construct one of their own. They see films and keep notebooks of pictures taken during class.

Nurses Club

In January these future nurses spent a night at L.G.H. in an attempt to experience a bit of the life of a student nurse. Although some of their idealistic ideas of nursing may have been somewhat destroyed, all came away with a renewed desire to be of service to mankind.

Darkroom Club

Darkroom Club People know that a picture must go through five solutions and a dryer. In working with the enlarger, they learn that photographic paper must have the proper f-stop to create a picture of good contrast.

The dots and dashes of the Morse Code are heard within the walls of the radio room. If a member works hard enough, he may earn his Novice License. Aside from this, he studies radio theory and tinkers with the oscilloscope.

First Aid Club

Little things like knowing about poisonous plants and snakes, or learning how to stop the flow of blood, or practicing mouth to mouth resuscitation may someday prove invaluable. The person with proper knowledge of first aid can be a life-saver.

Art Club

A basketball, an old cloth, a carton of empty Coke bottles, and a referee's whistle may seem like an assortment of unrelated objects to most of us. But to the Art Club member, they may become the harmonious subject of a detailed sketch.

Feminine intuitive creativity turns out some arty things in Needlecraft. Embroidered place mats, center pieces arrangements, and knitted articles are some of the things they made this year.

Needlecraft Club

Crafts Club

Sawing, sanding, and varnishing wood is known to be a masculine thing, but the crafty girls in Crafts Club changed all that.

Big Red and Little Roar (as their students affectionately refer to them) spend much time expounding on all kinds of rules for all kinds of sports, with the purpose of producing efficient officiating personnel for athletic events.

Worship

Our school stresses very much the spiritual man.

For the dorm student there is time set aside for personal worship twice a day, and a half-hour prayer circle in the evening.

For both the dorm and the day student there is a twenty minute chapel period before classes begin. On Tuesday there are several prayer groups that meet in the girls' dorm. And in the fall, revivals are held.

But all this organized worship becomes worthless unless there is within each of us unplanned times of adoration to God. Then can we be sure that we wear no mask; that our love for God is real.

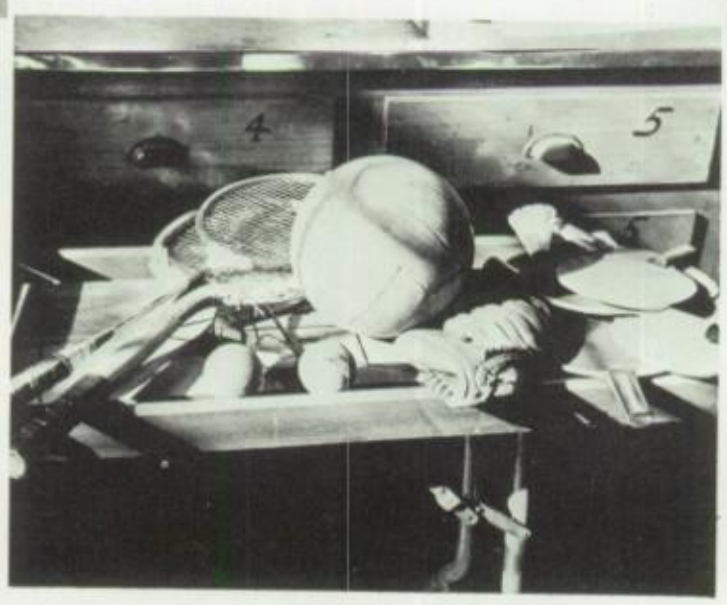
The critics agree that this year's Junior class presented a "best-ever" Christmas Carol.

The stretch and strain
Of a game today
Hurts good tomorrow.



Sore muscles
Pound out
  Pulsating rhythms
Like the beat
Of a bouncing b-ball.

With every basket I make today
I'll feel the net swing tomorrow.

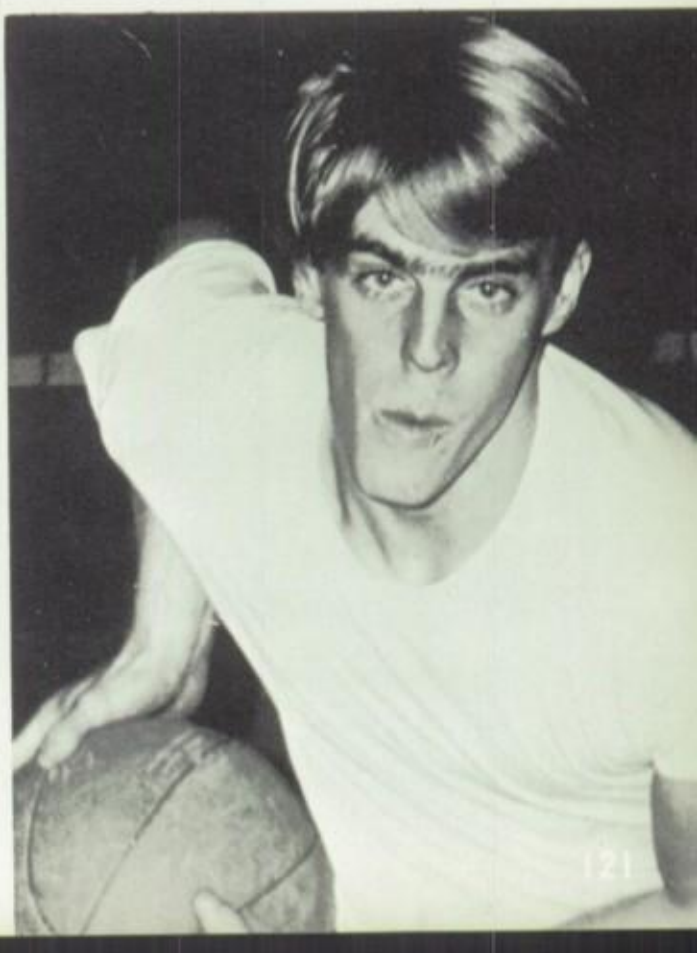
Sports



We played so rough
we had to take a two week vacation and arrange insurance policy matters . . .
We played hard and good—
Football is a solid game
Solid and fast Exhilarating.
We lashed the elliptical ball into Its orbit
And kicked the turf under our soles
To reach it before it slammed into the earth
"Yeah Dorm!"
"1, 2, 3, Day!"
We played hard.

Dribbling, passing—cocking the ball and with precision swishing it through the hoop.

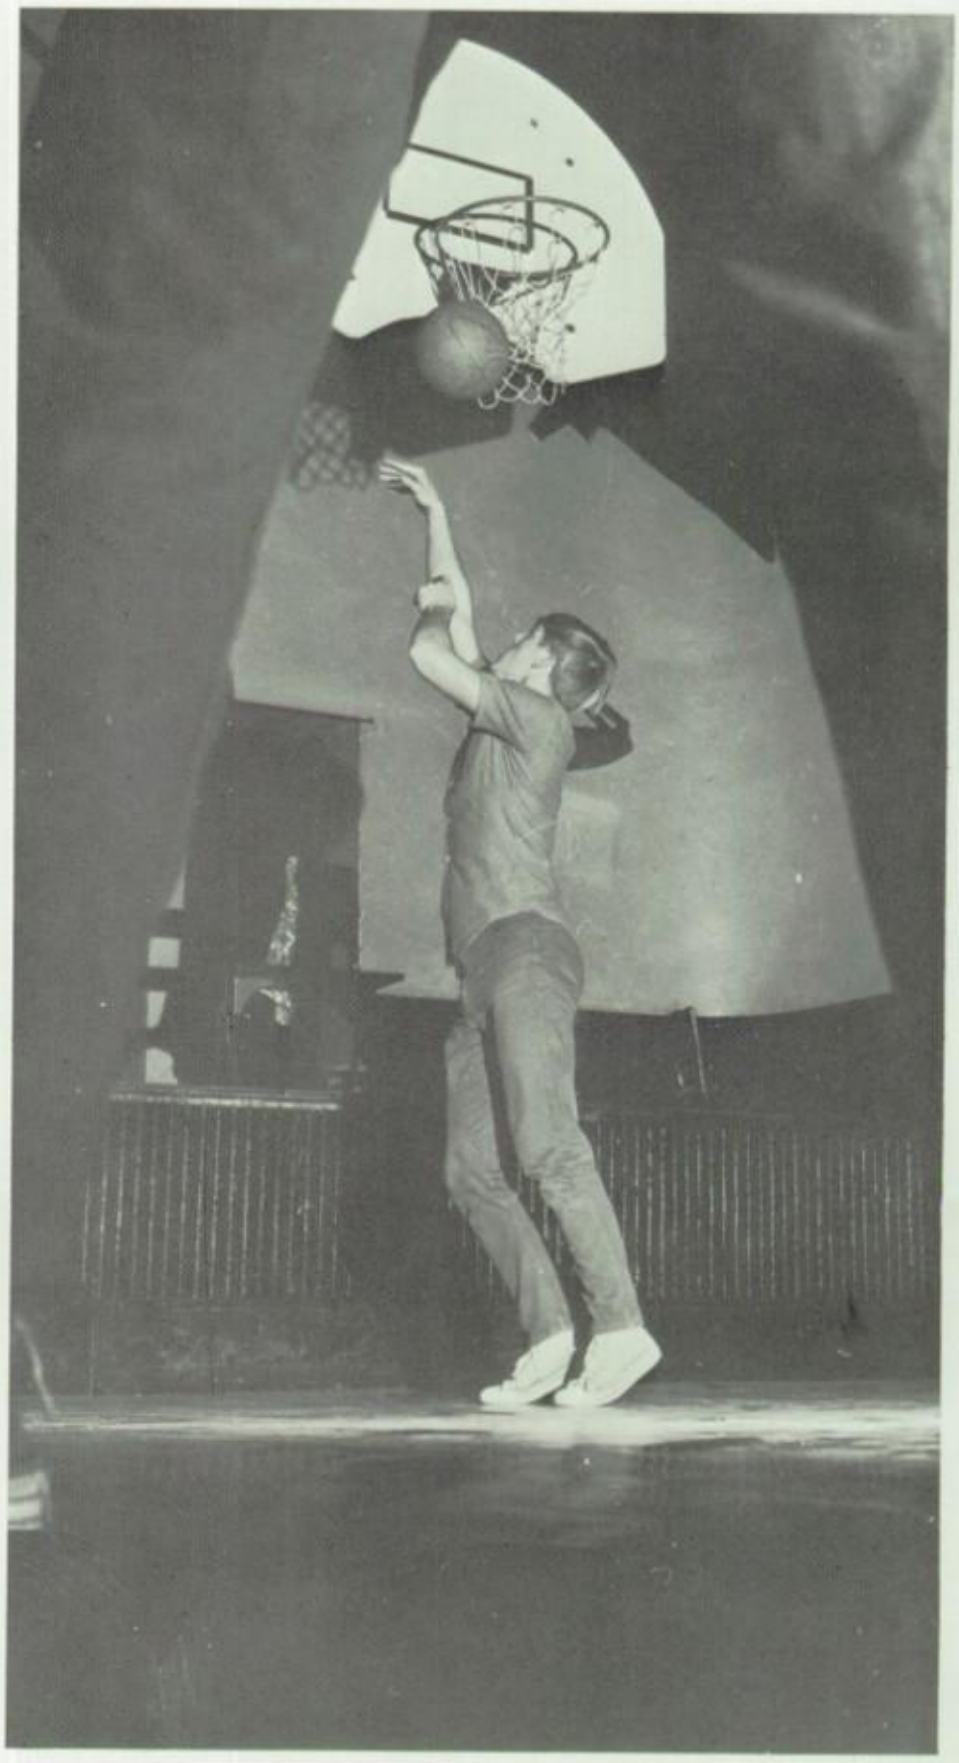
Basketball was a spectator sport
as much as an action game.



Evenings during freetime,
Thursday free periods,
Pinnies and culottes for the girls,
Hercs played Socs,
And Juniors, Seniors.
We watched
And cheered.

There's the Takedown Reversal
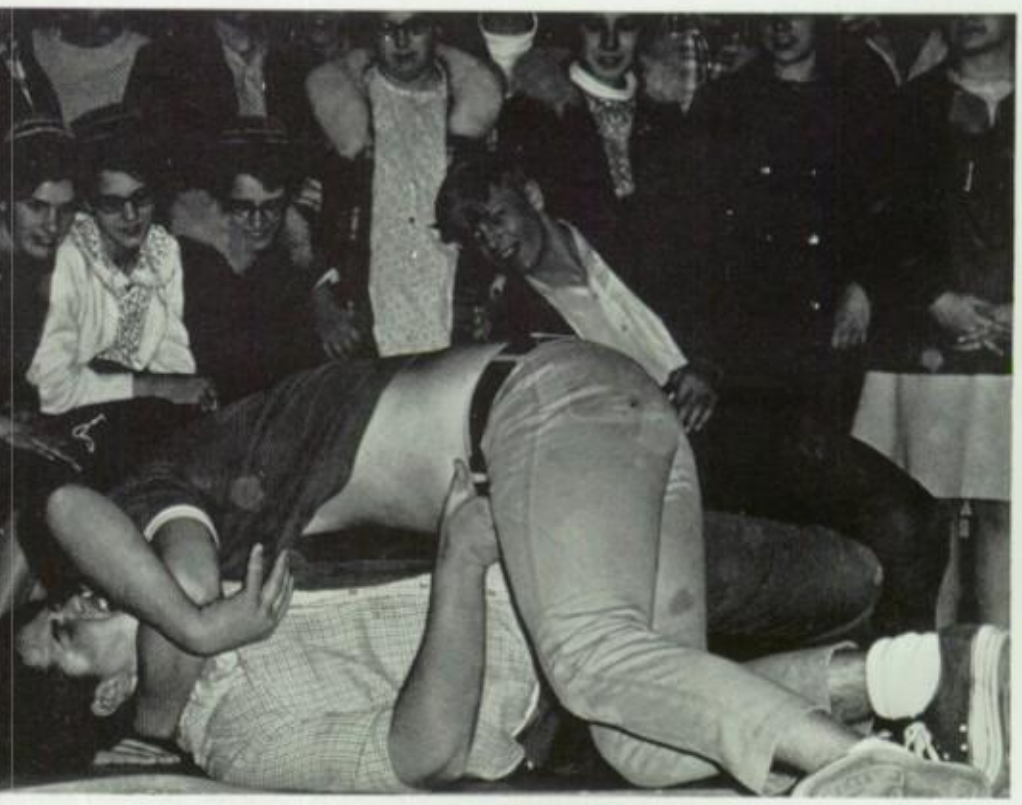
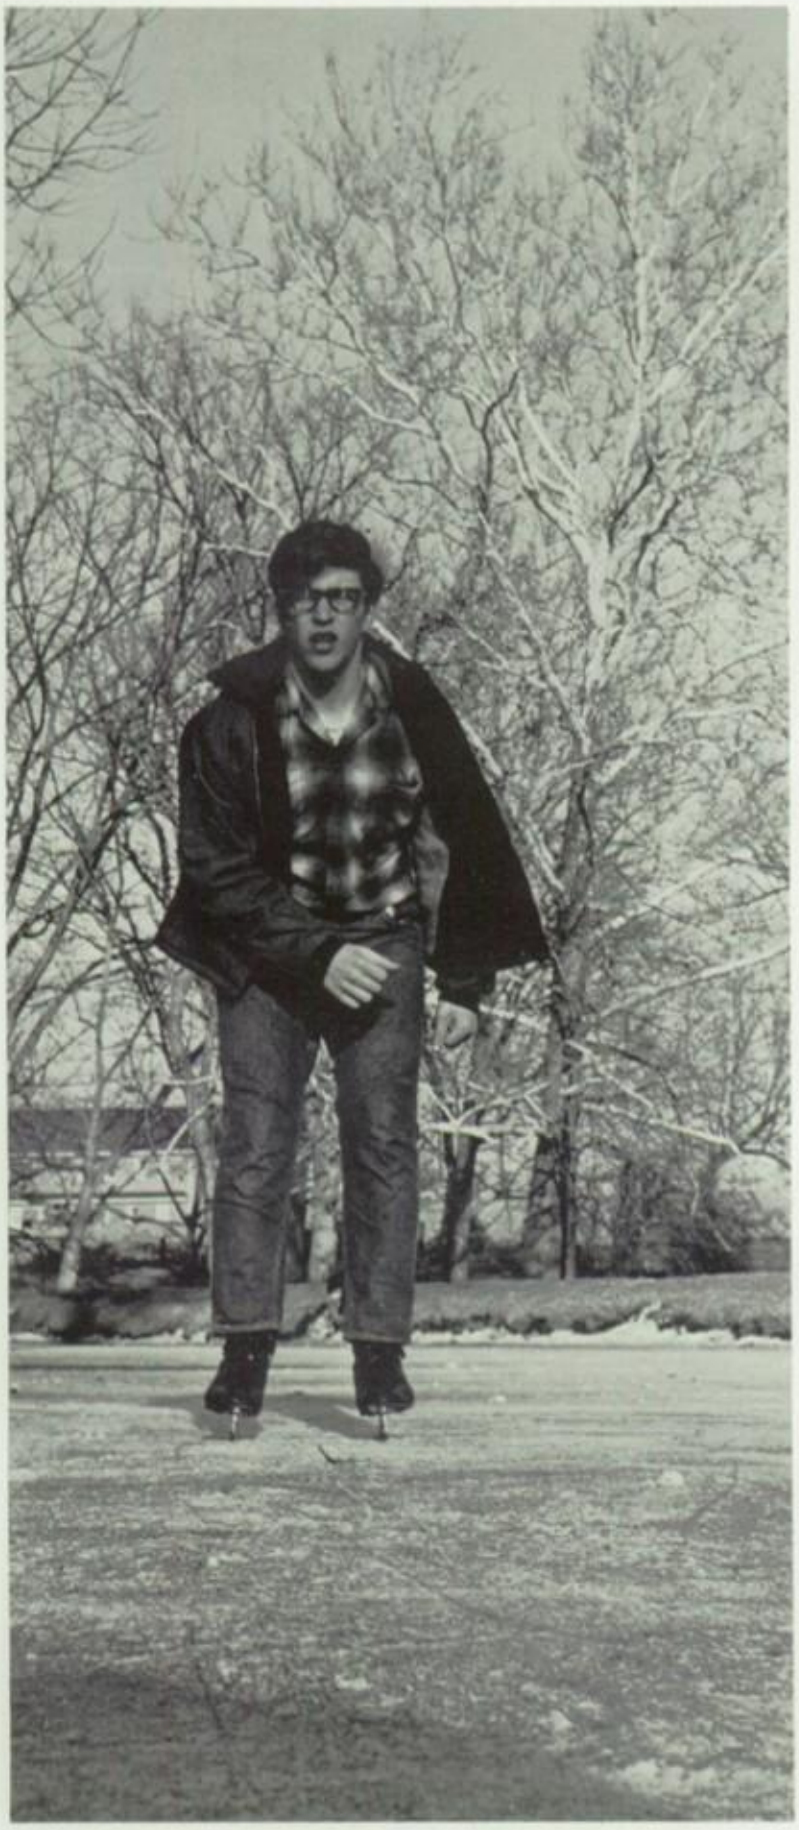
Near fall
And then the pin.
All kinds of holds—
Half-nelson
Three quarter-nelson
Chicken Wing
Cradle
And reverse cradle.

Experience and know-how are the keys to a good wrestler.





Crisp lung movement
Tingling ears—
The silver gliders on a wide open pond.
Some play hockey
Some stand waiting
For the ice to crack
Some thrash arms
For added momentum
Like earthly birds,
Those silver gliders.

There's something about baseball that smells like spring.
Maybe it's the damp earth that rushes up to meet your face as you slide into home base.
Or the movement of balmy air
from a wind-slicing
baseball bat.
Or it might be the solid, good-earth feeling that comes when the ball smacks hard in your glove.
There's something about baseball that smells like spring.

The
ping-pong ball
sings in hollow
plink plunk plunk time.

Depending on my mood
I'll smash it dead.

Flying proud and free
the tennis ball beckons me.

Running
setting my feet
leveling the racquet at my waist and swinging firm
I'll subjugate that ball
and send it back.

THE MYSTIC IN YOU

I liked you best
When I believed you to be
A mystic—
Someone I could never really know.

I wanted to find you Gradually,
Learn something new about you
Every day.

I wanted you to Shock me,
Laugh at me,
And tell me if you thought I was wrong.

I wanted you to Think the way you liked
And share your thoughts with me.

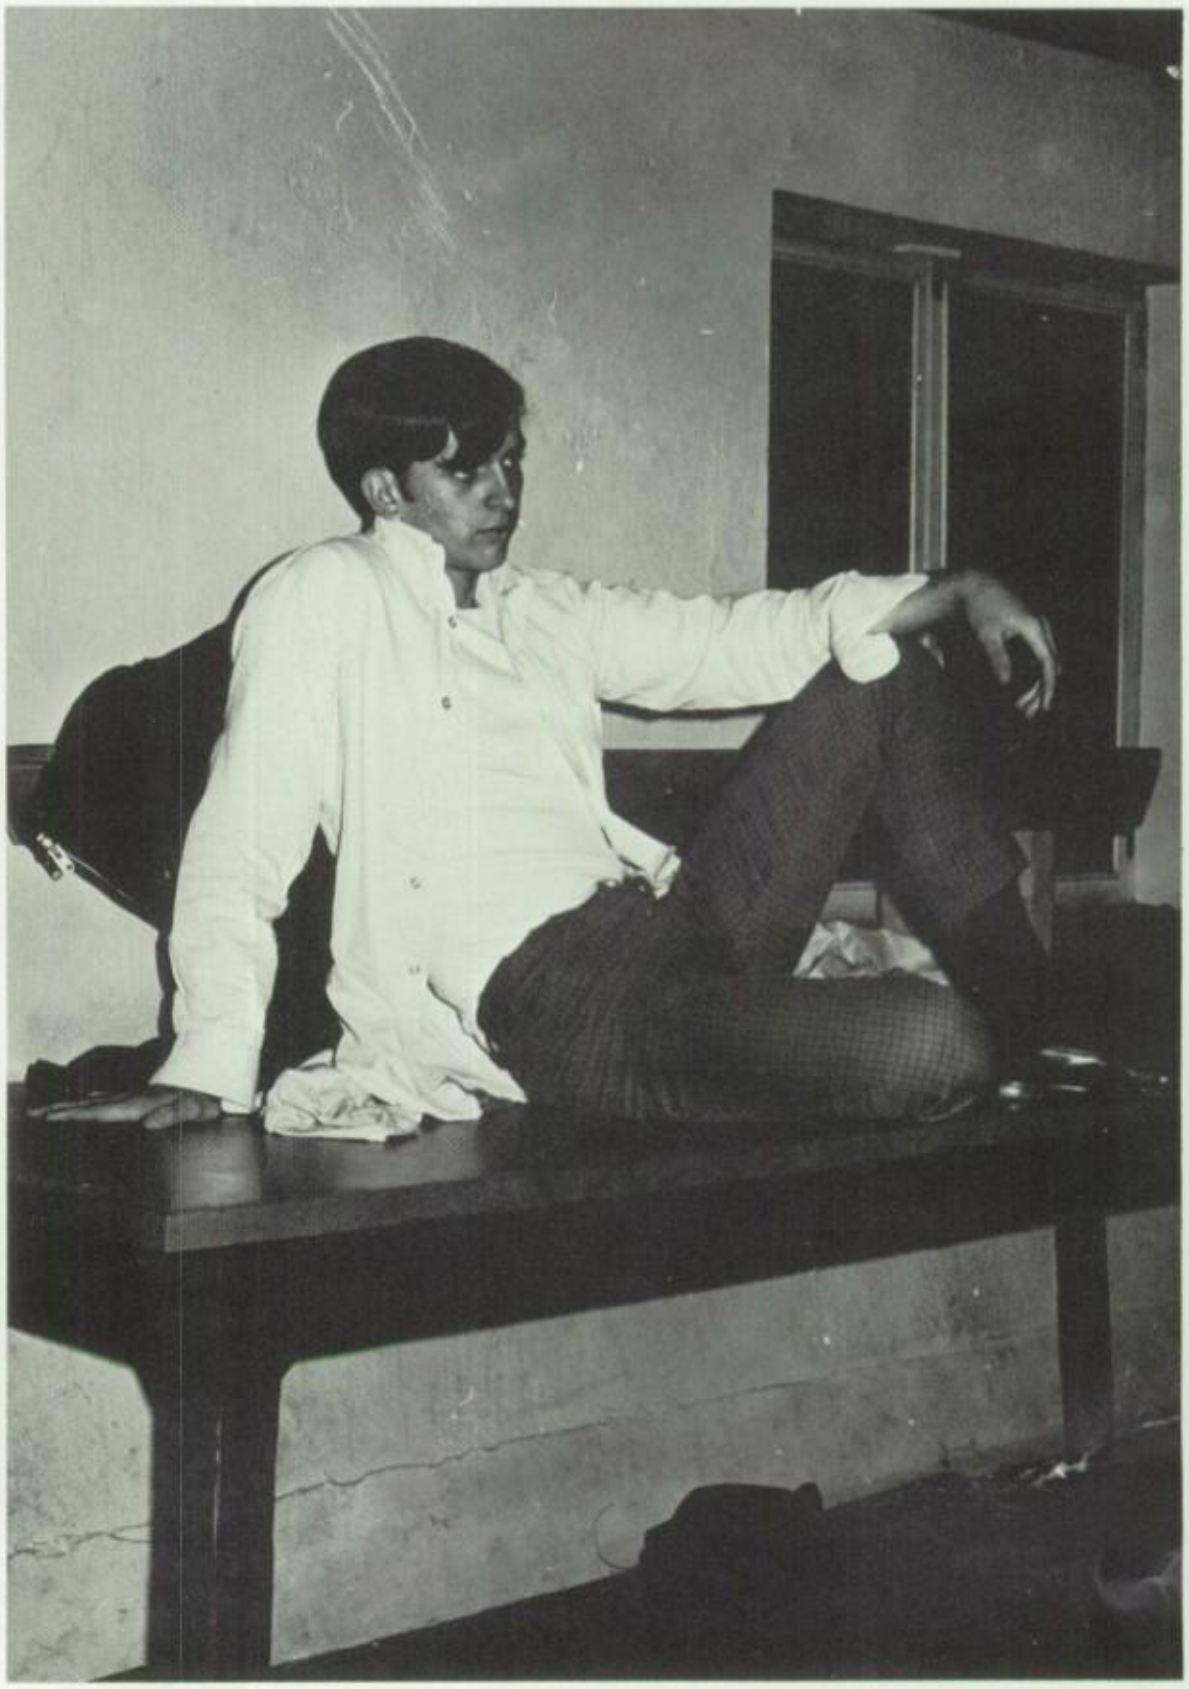
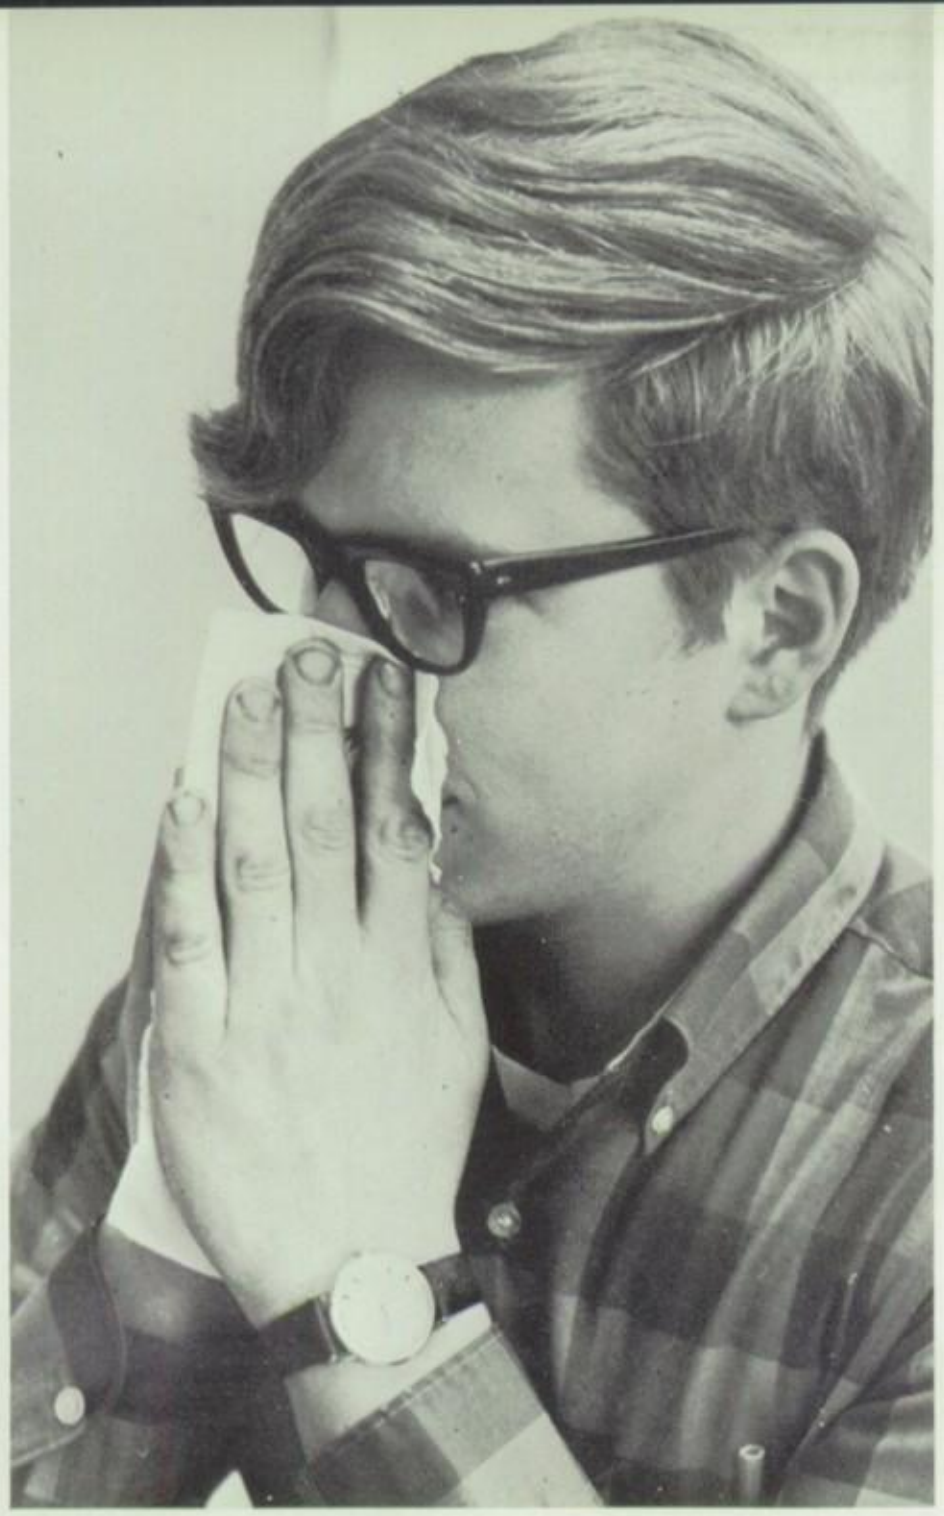
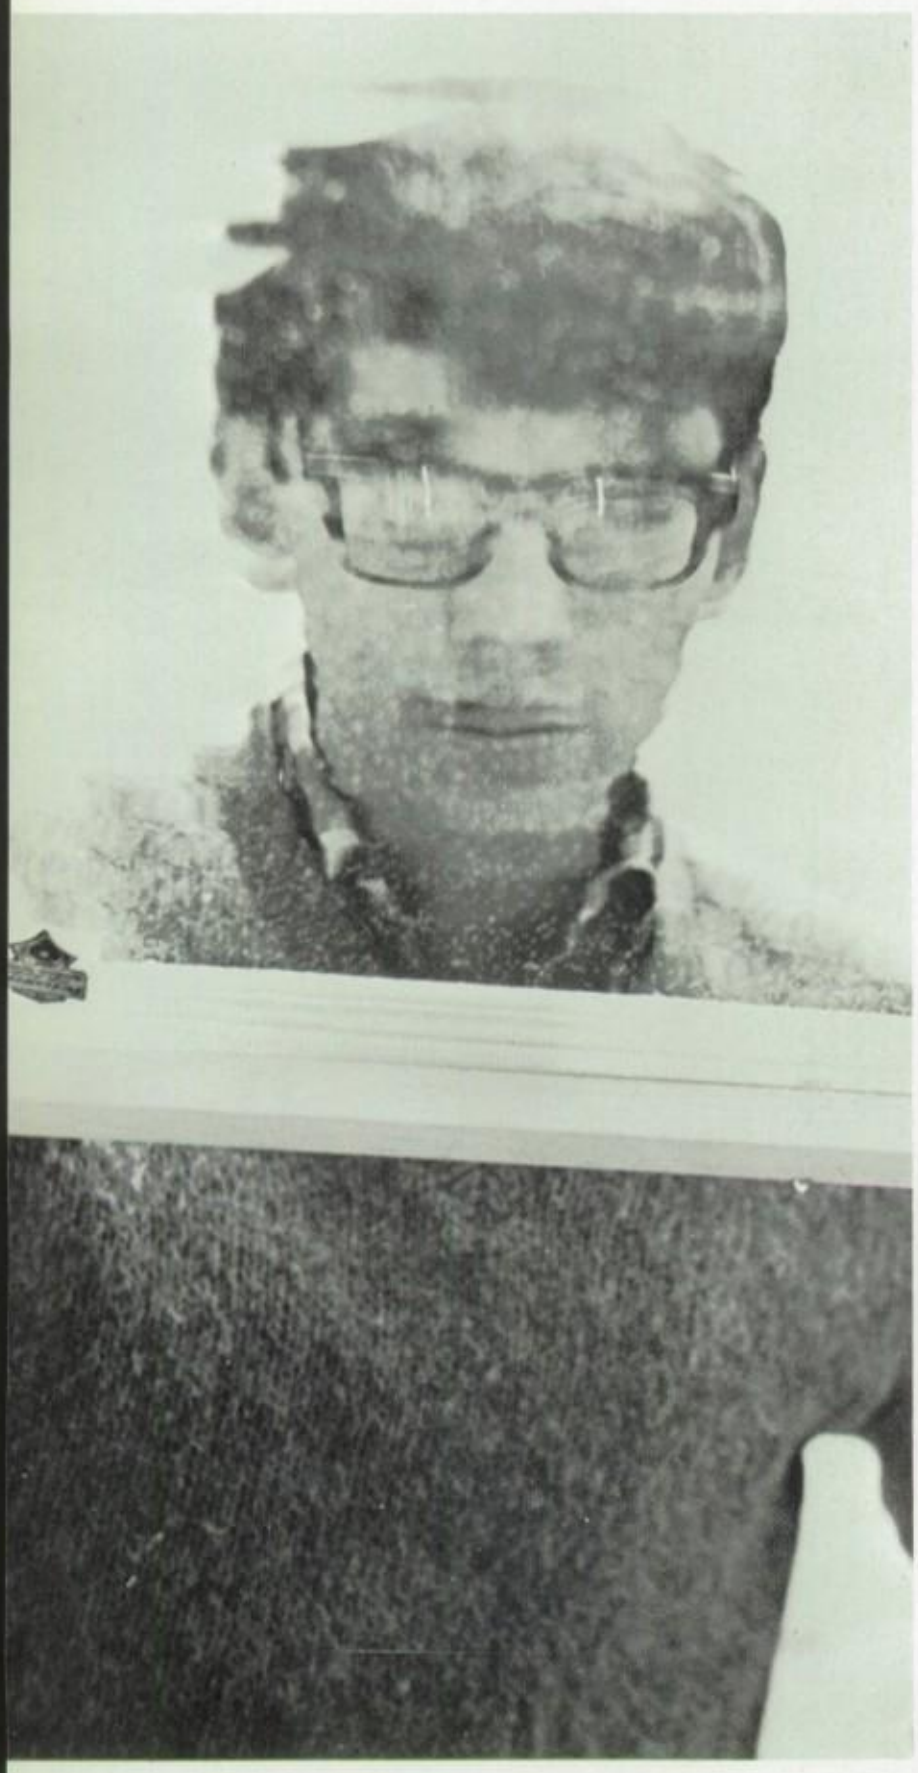
I liked you best
When I believed you to be
A mystic.







BE MY OWN MAN

My teachers tell me,
"You have to think
For yourself."
So I think
For myself.

Sometimes
I think so hard
That I end up
With an endless chain of questions.
And then I think,
"Why must I think
If I only get confused?
Why can't I just believe
What you tell me?"

Maybe it's because I'm a person
With bones
And blood
And a soul.
A person who isn't satisfied with an idea
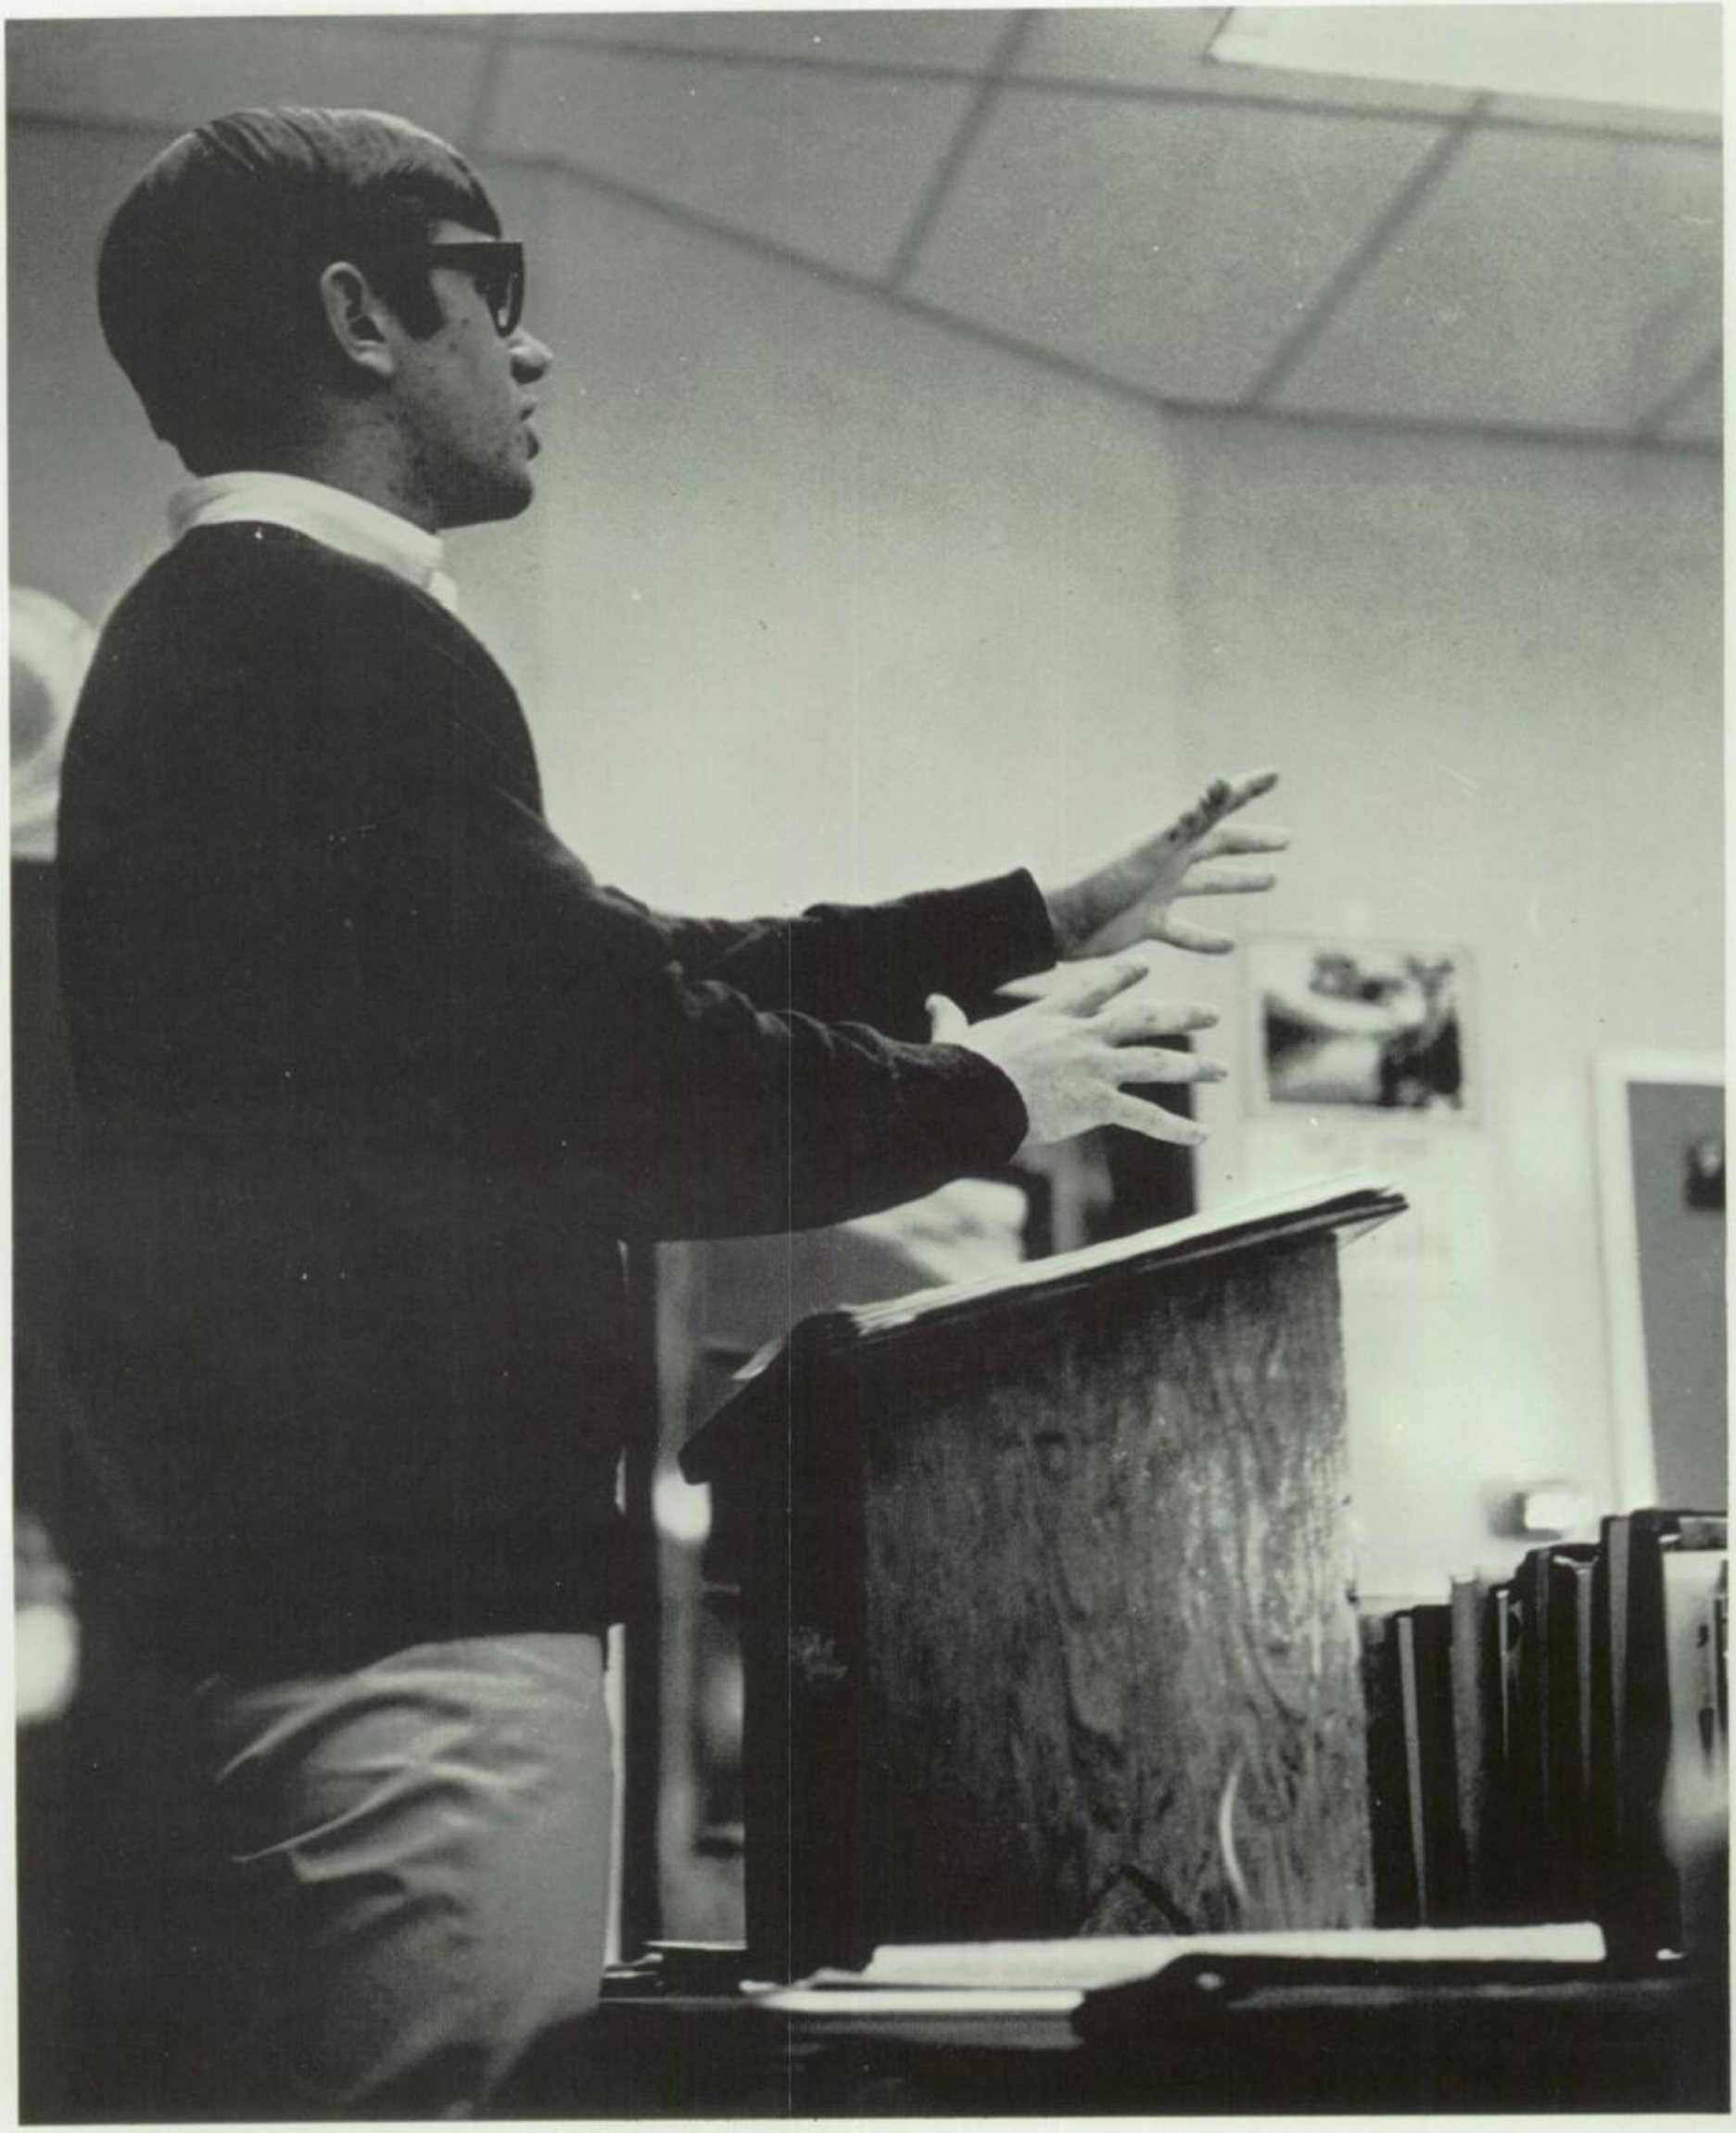
Unless it's my own.
I guess that's why.



PARKING LOT LEGEND

I like to Just laugh
Just talk
Just walk around
Before I go.
There's people here
That like to do
The same.
In this school
The parking lot is for Exchange.

LIFE'S TWO-WAY, MAN

Somehow
You didn't click with me.
(We're made to walk on different streets, I thought.)
So when I passed you
In the hall
I looked ahead.
But you said, "Hi," and smiled,
And something in your smile
moved with my mind.
(I walked on your street now. Or is it only that you walk on mine?)

And what of Experiment 69?
The end?
No.
  Number 69 will help us do 70.
And so it will never really die.

But seems like if I had this year
  to live over
  I'd change some things.
Because I can't go back,
  I learn.
  about you.
  about me.
  about life and this school.

People say
  in a few short years
  I'll forget the friends
  I knew here,
  that time has a way of changing things.
Though names become forgotten words and faces blur to join the sea
  of ever-changing faces,
Clear and lasting, undimmed by time are the ideas you once shared with me in little words.
Ever present
Ever gentle on my mind.

Golden Rays in Thy Sunrise

Rays
Penetrating darkness
Softening the hardness
Found in hearts of men
        Men without hope
        Men without cheer
        Men without God
Men who need fragments of love to seep in Fragments of love replacing the sin of hate that fills the soul until
Its cancerous grip no longer releases
        the heart for God's love.

We are those rays
The youth of today
By reaching to others
We reach to ourselves
By searching ourselves
We serve one another
Our living example;
Christ's love that's in us
Helps others cast out
The gloom of despair
Helps others believe
That God really does care
Restoring the hope
Restoring the cheer
By showing them God
A God Who is there
To add to the sunrise
With each golden ray
The beauty and hope
in the dawn of new day.

A bouquet of acknowledgements to:

JANET GEHMAN, who came to school when she was sick only because of Laurel Wreath and who also went without evening meals to help us meet deadlines.

FLOYD ZOOK, who assisted the financial department.

PHIL MARTIN, who helped with shutterbugging and was chief darkroom technician.

DORIS WEAVER, who criticized the script for the literary editor.

The STUDENT SALES CAPTAINS

All those who helped with senior descriptions.

The ROOMMATES and FAMILIES of the staff who remained a bulwark of serenity in the midst of mental turmoil.

The STUDENTS FROM HERSHEY'S CHURCH who identified classmates' pictures to help us meet the December deadline.

EDWARD PATRICK, Taylor representative, who gave us the first push and straightened our course now and then.
